The market was rather active and prices ruled about steady. The demand for all kinds of grain markets were not favorable to strong prices or an active market. Some cattle were unsold at the close. Chicago market slow and dull, Kansas City lower. The hog market opened 21-2 cents lower than Saturday's close, and about half the hogs sold at those figures. Late reports from Kansas City recorded lower prices and this market broke to $3.50. The close was barely steady at the decline.

THE CLOUDSERRY.

Amid the sections of eternal snows That gird the pole or wrap the haughty brows Of mountains gazing into heaven serene 'Mid storm and wrack, a little flow'r is seen. Afur from ev'ry sister bud that stays Southward to drink the sun's perpetual rays, With petals bravely lifted o'er the snow, And roots far searching for the warmth below, It beliefly faces desolation, storm, And nerves again the weary traveler's form. Its tiny blossoms smile beneath his feet Or amber fruits his longing glances greet. Pale flow'r' to me thou seemest like the friend Who Regers with us to life's journey's end; For as we pass from youth's meridian heat Life's flowr's grow fewer, fewer friends we meet Till, as we enter age's polar snow. One friend at most, one only friend we know. But to our hearts than all before more dearentered memory of these who were.

Margaret Thomas in Youth's Companion.

In bringing out these relics of the first president, it is well to recall once more the alutary fact that the first soldier of the New World remains also its first citizen. As a soldier, it is easy now to see that his greatness consisted largely in the way he received disaster. He proved his nobility in rising above defeat, in wrenching suc cess from fallure; in keeping an immovable front against revers , detraction and infamous abuse. His life was one long struggle; not, as to a supercificial view i might seem, a series of mere fortunate successes. High character, rather than "good luck," was his immortal equipment But it is as a citizen that Washington gives what may be thought to be the most valuable lesson of his career—the lesson of absolute honesty, absolute disinterestedness. Let these who preach, who teach, who vote, make the contrast on all occasions between the tone of Washington and that of every public man of today who falls below his standard. The standard is not too high for any man. Washington was no angel saint or demigred. We have a right to exact from every man who takes public service equal public virtue. The people do this theoretically, if not practically, already; but we will not have city, or national government what it should be till we make the demand in practice as well as in theory. - Century.

I have a grievance, and I want to talk about it. It is the irritating, rustling, tormenting, wretched programmes in use at the theatres. Why on earth den't people confine their advertising to the columns of the dailies and weeklies and let the pro-gramme alone? Who wants to read of undertakers who will bury you in the most correct manner, when one is trying to forget all such melancholy matters in the warblings of Abbott and Juch? What in the world can be more exasperating than to go to a play with a desire to hear some thing of what's going on, and at the most exciting moment to have people before or behind, or one side of you, hunting out the and rustling and rattling until you fee that you want to rise up in your wrath and shake somebody. Why cannot we have small, stiff cards, or large ones if you like, so long as they are stiff and won't rustle with the cast, etc., alone printed on them?

An Island Infested with Rats Bean's Island, an uninhabited piece of land lying in Frenchman's bay, off the coast of Maine, would be a paradise for cats. It is infested with rats, and how they reached there no one can tell. It is the general supposition that some years ago a in the bay, and that it had rate among the other valuable portions of its cargo. rodents are there by thousands, and they fairly swarm over the island. Any one who is not foud of them does well to give the place a wide berth, for they know no fear and make it interesting for visitors. Much of the Island is low and flat, and is so perforated with their holes that it resembles a sieve. How they live is a mystery. No one knows of any fresh water upon the island, so the rate must have been he sole discoverers of some hidden spring.

The decay of the old eak on the college campus at Athens, known as the Bob Toombs oak, is regretted by all friends and alumni of the college. The tree and the man had lives that were coincident throughout. They both sprang into renown from the moment that the Georgian made his great speech beneath its branches, and they both passed away almost simultaneously. After the death of Gen Toombe the old tree began to decay rapidly, and has at last failen beneath the power of time's telling
